“We will use the information and data to identify areas where we need to maintain a strong focus and we will continue to make literacy and numeracy foundational to every subject, at every grade level,” adds Jo- Anne Lanctot. “Providing students with flexible learning environments and opportunities for personalized learning in an inclusive education setting will help to ensure student success.”

A divisional as well as provincial focus is improving educational opportunities for First Nations, Metis, and Inuit (FNMI) learners. As a division, Living Waters saw a 16.7% increase in High School completion rates in one year. In addition, Living Waters is significantly above the provincial rate for High School completion for FNMI learners with a difference of 13.6%.

“We are incredibly proud of the work our staff is doing to make a difference for all of our students in Living Waters, but we are particularly delighted with the gains we have made in relation to our FNMI learners,” says, Jo-Anne Lanctot.
